Again, I am deeply indebted to Christ Mitchell, dance team coordinator, for lifting my songs off of the page and giving them life. This was written as a processional for dancers. It is performed in a very stately manner for a solemn assembly. The dancers processed up the aisles and placed their banners at the front of the church and then in an act of humility, because they were standing on holy ground, they removed their dance slippers and prostrated themselves at the altar, and laid their shoes before the alter -- submitting their lives, their prayers, their gifts, and their service to the Lamb upon the throne. What a beautiful visual of the consecrated life. May we remain so submitted and so committed.
